Shul News . . .

- Pruzbul: Jewish law obligates every Jewish person to cancel, after the culmination of the shmittah year, various types of debt due to him or her. If a creditor executes a pruzbul, he or she is not obligated to cancel debts. A pruzbul may be executed at any time before the end of the shmittah year. However, since a pruzbul covers only debts already existing at the time of its execution, it is usually implemented at the very end of the year. This Rosh Hashana marks the end of the shmittah year. Click here for instructions for creating a pruzbul Click here for instructions for Pruzbul – 5775 \(PDF\) If you have any questions about a pruzbul, please contact Rabbi Smason.

*Welcome to Beyond Twelve Gates by Rabbi Ze'ev Smason
Parshas Ki Savo     September 5, 2015*

“Two Cat-Fisherman and a Purr-fect Ending!”

Two men out enjoying a day of fishing made the catch of a lifetime over the weekend -- one that saved the lives of two unlikely "keepers." Jason Frost and his friend Brandon Key were rod fishing in the Warrior River in Alabama on Saturday when they heard a splash and saw something swimming across the water toward them. They weren't sure exactly what it was until they heard the meows . . . As the pair floated along in their boat, they spied in the distance a tiny orange kitten swimming toward them at full speed, seemingly from out of nowhere.

Jason, clearly befuddled, plucked the animal from the water to safety. Then, moments later, another kitten joined the first and was likewise saved. "Never in my life have I seen anything like that," Jason said in a video of the incident. It's unclear where the kittens came from, but given the remote location where they were found, Jason suspects they had been abandoned by some cruel person. Fortunately, the kittens' bold bid for attention from the passing fishermen couldn't have gone more smoothly, and it ultimately got them what they needed most. After bringing the kittens back to shore, the 'cat' fishermen met a young family who offered to give them a home -- providing a happy ending to what is easily one of the most unfathomable fishing stories ever told.

Judaism places great stress on proper treatment of animals. Unnecessary cruelty to animals is strictly forbidden, and in many cases, animals are accorded the same sensitivity as human beings. Jacob, Moses, and David were all shepherds, people who cared for animals. Likewise, Rebecca was chosen as a wife for Isaac because of her kindness to animals. When Abraham's servant asked for water for himself, she volunteered to water his camels as well, and thereby proved herself a worthy wife. Our Sages often emphasize how considerate and kind human beings must be towards animals, in keeping with the ways of G-d, of Whom it is written, "His mercies extend to all His creatures" (Psalms 145:9).

Parshas Ki Savo Deuteronomy 26:1 -- 29:8

The parsha begins by describing the annual mitzvah for farmers in Israel to bring their bikurim, or first fruits, to the Kohen in the Temple. The donor was then to recite a prayer of thanksgiving, recalling how G-d had delivered his ancestors from Egypt and brought the new generation into a land flowing with milk and honey.

Moses then teaches two special mitzvos, which the Jewish people are to perform upon entering the land of Israel. First, they are to inscribe the entire Torah on twelve large stones. Second, the twelve tribes are to ratify their acceptance of the Torah in the following manner; six tribes were to stand on Mt. Gerizim, representing the blessings, while the remaining six tribes were to stand on Mt. Eival, signifying the curses. The Levites were to stand in the valley between, reciting blessings and curses which will apply respectively to those who observe and defy the Torah. The parsha concludes with a recounting of the wonderful blessings G-d will bestow upon the Jewish people for remaining faithful, and a chilling prophecy of what might happen if the Jewish people do not follow the Torah.

Rabbinic Ruminations

Not happy with your photo? You're not alone. Strangers can make better selections of photos that are 'good representations' of ourselves, a new study finds. For the study, people chose pictures of themselves from Facebook and ranked them from most to worst likeness. A group of strangers then tried to match up the photos with a short webcam video of each person. The strangers chose a different set of 'good likeness' pictures than people did of themselves. The photos chosen by strangers led to 7% more accurate identification.

Dr. David White, who led the study, said: "Existing memory representations interfere with our ability to choose images that are good representations or faithfully depict our current appearance."

The challenge of accurately judging our current appearance was dramatically shown in a 2013 ad for Dove soap. Inspired by market research that suggested only 4% of women describe themselves as beautiful, an FBI forensic artist sketched a series of women based purely on the way they described themselves and again as others described them. The artist could only hear their voices, not see their faces. A video (seen more than 66 million times on YouTube) about the experiment revealed the stark difference between the way the women saw themselves and the way others saw them. Across the board, the self-described portraits were the least attractive -- suggesting, according to the Dove marketing team, that women are more beautiful than they think they are.

In these remaining days ahead of the High Holy Days, we find ourselves in a time of personal inventory. How do we engage in a process where we fairly examine the character flaws that impact our lives, without falling victim to an unfair, inaccurate self-view? "You shall not pervert judgement ..." (Deut. 16:19) Judging, the Torah reminds us, is not condemning. Judging is hearing arguments from all sides, weighing the evidence at hand, assessing, and forming an opinion. Therefore, first and foremost, we are to be fair in a self-assessment of all aspects of our current appearance.

Impossible is a word only to be found in the dictionary of fools. -- Napoleon Bonaparte

Joke of the Week

An older woman walked into the local synagogue. The friendly usher greeted her at the door, handed her a Shabbos bulletin, and politely asked, "Where would you like to sit?"

"The front row please," she answered.

"You really don't want to do that," the usher said. "The rabbi is really boring."

"Do you happen to know who I am?" the woman inquired.

"No," he said.

"I'm the rabbi's mother," she replied indignantly.

"Do you know who I am?" he asked.

"No," she said.

"Good," he answered.
